Good Faith Effort Program

CITY OF DALLAS

City Council Briefing

December 5, 2007

Purpose

- Outline overview/ history of Good Faith Effort (GFE) Plan
- Outline results and recommendations of Availability & Disparity Study
- Outline GFE Plan
- Discuss BDPS' role in the implementation of the GFE policy

Background

City of Dallas M/WBE Program

- Purpose of GFE Plan is to involve qualified minority and women owned business enterprises (M/WBEs) to the greatest extent feasible on the City's construction, procurement and professional services contracts
- In October 1984, Dallas City Council adopted the City's first Good Faith Effort (GFE) Plan which included race specific goals

Background

Legal Framework

- In 1989, Supreme Court review of M/WBE programs in public contracting determined:
 - Government institutions may adopt race-conscious goal programs only to remedy identified discrimination
 - Race-conscious goal programs must be narrowly tailored to remedy an identified discrimination
 - Court decisions ruled that both availability and disparity was needed to justify a goals based program
- Immediately following Supreme Court decisions, the City of Dallas began a review process of the City's existing race specific goals

Background

- In FY 89-90 and 90-91, the City of Dallas performed an in-house Availability & Disparity Study (A&D)
 - Analyzed the availability of M/WBE businesses within City of Dallas vendor database
 - Statistically determined disparity of M/WBE participation in awarded contracts
 - Analysis was based solely on vendor database and did not analyze availability of M/WBEs within the larger market; more developed sophisticated methods of analyzing availability within a designated market area were used in 2001 A&D Study
- After the 2 subsequent A&D Studies, the City of Dallas continued the race specific goals based program as established by council

Background

- In 1994, the City of Dallas commissioned another A&D Study to determine the City's continued need for M/WBE program
- Upon review of the 1994 A&D Study findings and with community input, Dallas City Council voted to continue City's M/WBE program
 - Adopted GFE Plan and established current goals without consideration for a specific ethnicity or gender defined through Supreme Court Rulings (Resolution Number 97-1605)

Background

Current GFE Plan goals are not distinguished by race or ethnicity of primes and subcontractors

- Established M/WBE Goals:
 - Construction: 25.00%
 - Architectural & Engineering : 25.66%
 - Professional Services: 36.30%
 - Other Services: 23.80%
 - Goods: 18.00%
- Goals were to be met by utilizing local (inside City of Dallas boundaries) M/WBE businesses
 - A State Law, which has been sunseted, required municipalities to utilize municipal boundaries for M/WBE programs

Background

- Goals could be met by a combination of locally-owned M/WBE prime contractors and/or M/WBE subcontractors
- Non local M/WBE primes and subs do not count towards the GFE goal but are considered as evidence of compliance with the GFE plan
- Compliance with the City's GFE policy is demonstrated by the good-faith effort made by the prime contractor to utilize M/WBE subcontractors

Background

2001 A&D Study

- Recognizing that market forces and factors change, in January 2001 the Dallas City Council commissioned an A&D Study to be completed by Mason-Tillman
 - Reviewed City's contracting & purchasing policies from October 1997 to September 2000
 - Assessed the total number of contract awards & contract dollars expended during this time period
 - Analyzed number of contracts and dollar amount of awards to M/WBEs
 - Researched availability of M/WBEs within market area
 - Redefined market area from City of Dallas to Dallas County (will also include areas of City of Dallas that are not located within Dallas County)
 - Conducted statistical analysis of disparity

Background

- Prior to 2001 A&D Study, analysis was limited to City's vendor database and did not consider overall availability of M/WBE businesses within a designated market area
- Identifying the local market area is a key component to an availability analysis because it establishes the parameters for the study as defined through Supreme Court rulings
- During study period, City of Dallas awarded 42,906 prime contracts
 - 77.1% of contracts awarded were awarded to primes located within the City and County of Dallas
 - 72.9% of awarded dollars were awarded to primes located within the City and County of Dallas
- Based on the percentages of awards and dollars spent, the market area was defined as both the City and County of Dallas

Availability and Disparity Study Results

- Disparity existed in the Prime contracting categories for all M/WBEs
 - State law does not allow bids to be awarded to prime contractors on basis of ethnicity, so M/WBE Good Faith Effort goals are geared toward use of M/WBE subcontractors
- Disparity existed in the Subcontracting Construction category for African Americans and Asian American only

Availability and Disparity Study Results (by ethnic groups)

	African Americans	Asian Americans	Hispanic Americans	Native Americans	White Females
PRIMES
Construction	X	X	X	X	X
A&E	X	X			X
Professional Services	X	X	X	X	X
Goods & Other Services	X		X		X
SUB CONTRACTING
Construction	X	X
A&E

X=Disparity

Disparity exists in subcontracting construction category for African Americans and Asian Americans only

Additional Analysis

- Since subcontracting disparity existed in only 2 ethnic categories, another study was needed to determine if utilization of M/WBEs was a result of market conditions or the impact of City's GFE Policy
- City contracted with Mason Tillman for an additional study
 - A But/For Study was commissioned February 2003 to determine but for the City's M/WBE program, utilization of M/WBEs would not be at existing levels

Additional Analysis

- Methodology:
 - Utilized prime contractor data
 - Compared subcontractor usage on work completed for the City of Dallas to work completed in the private sector or other governing bodies without a goals based M/WBE program

- Findings:
 - While there were not enough responses to survey information to determine statistical evidence, anecdotal findings indicated But/For for the City's M/WBE program, utilization of M/WBEs would be significantly less
 - The City's M/WBE program, and not natural market forces is what influences M/WBE participation in City contracts

Overall Study Results

- A&D and But/For Studies indicated a continuation of the GFE race neutral goals based program
- To address areas of disparity, the City of Dallas would continue to conduct overall outreach programs that include bidding workshops, financial assistance programs and one-on-one vendor awareness sessions

Good Faith Effort plan

- Upon review of the 2001 A&D Study findings and with community input, Dallas City Council voted to continue City's M/WBE program on March 2004 (Resolution Number 04-1033)
- GFE Plan includes the following:
 - Policy Statement
 - Involve qualified M/WBEs to the greatest extent feasible in City's contracting opportunities
 - Prevent discrimination based on race color, religion, national origin or sex in the award and performance of contracts
 - Scope of Plan
 - Applies to all contracts above $25K (but we monitor, track, and report all expenditures) with a special emphasis on subcontracting opportunities
 - Applies to first-tier subcontractors
 - Administration of Plan
 - Establishes City Manager as responsible for administration and implementation of Plan
 - Designates Assistant City Manager as M/WBE Liaison Officer

Good Faith Effort plan

- Appoints Business Development and Procurement Services (BDPS) as responsible department for administration of the GFE Plan
 - Conduct outreach functions
 - Provide bonding, financing and technical assistance services
 - Communicate procedures for compliance & distribute City's M/WBE goals and requirements
 - Maintain and distribute a directory of certified and registered M/WBEs
 - Review submitted GFE documentation
- Certification Requirements
 - Outlines North Central Texas Regional Certification Agency (NCTRCA) certification
 - Allows for acceptance of certification from other organizations using same essential criteria
 - DFW Minority Business Council
 - Women's Business Council – Southwest

Good Faith Effort Plan

- Goals
 - Maintains current goals in all categories:
 - Construction: 25.00%
 - Architectural and Engineering: 25.66%
 - Professional Services: 36.30%
 - Other Services: 23.80%
 - Goods: 18.00%

Good Faith Effort Plan

- Acts of Good Faith Efforts
 - Determination of good faith efforts is based on the apparent awardee:
 - Submitting GFE affidavit in which vendors submit prior to award confirming compliance with the GFE policy
 - Contacting the BDPS RLT for assistance in identifying potential M/WBE subcontractors
 - Communicating with and attempting to get quotes from at least 5% of M/WBE companies listed on the City's M/WBE list provided by the RLT
 - Failure to comply with GFE requirements will result with vendor being deemed non responsive and bid awarded to the next lowest bidder or advantageous proposer

Good Faith Effort Plan

- GFE goals met
 - Goals approved by City Council on $25K contracts and above are monitored throughout the term of the contract by the City's Good Faith Effort (GFE) group (a group of contract compliance specialist responsible for tracking and monitoring and reporting M/WBE performance)
 - Any changes made in the use of minority of firms must be approved by the City's GFE group. Failure to document changes in M/WBE usage may be considered in future awards
- GFE goals not met
 - If the goals are not met, the vendors can still be in compliance with the GFE policy through adequate documentation of their good faith efforts to meet the goal, which is reviewed for compliance and approval by the GFE group

Administration of GFE Plan

- As part of FY 03-04 budget process, the administration of the GFE Plan was consolidated to BDPS
 - General Fund savings of $200K
 - Allows project managers to focus on progress of project
 - Provides single location for primes and subs to obtain assistance in complying with the GFE policy
 - Provides location for subcontractors to obtain information on payment issues or other questions regarding progression of project
- Efficiencies of consolidation
 - Provide centralized location for contractors and subcontractors to obtain and report GFE information and resolve GFE-related issues
 - Provide administrative services to contracting departments, alleviating the need for project managers to perform administrative duties related to implementation of the GFE policy

Administration of GFE Plan

- Consolidation also allowed for implementation of other program improvements recommended by Mason -Tillman:
 - Use citywide tracking system to track awards, change orders and subcontractor payments
 - Ensure appropriate lead time for bid notifications
 - Improve payment turnaround time
 - Provide bonding assistance for small contracts through contract with SSP Consulting Inc.

Administration of GFE Plan

- Implementation of A&D Study recommendations:
 - Citywide tracking system (CityBOTS) was a big change in the monitoring, tracking and reporting of GFE performance that links to the City's financial system which was not available in the past
 - Captures actual payments from primes to subcontractors on a department and citywide basis; providing a more exact picture of citywide GFE performance
 - Centralized, accurate, user friendly and timely reporting of "GFE performance quarterly report
 - Allows us to:
 - track subcontractor participation and subcontractor changes through life of project which requires approval by the GFE group so as to ascertain that approved GFE goals are met
 - assist subcontractors with information regarding payments made to primes and project status
 - identify M/WBE that have successfully participated as primes and/or subs
 - be able to monitor the growth of M/WBEs from subs to primes

Administration of GFE Plan

- Ensure appropriate lead time for bid notifications
 - BDPS hosts quarterly construction and Architecture & Engineering roundtables to promote awareness of upcoming projects
 - Bid notices sent electronically through the City's web base procurement system
 - Advertise all formal bids in The Dallas Morning News
 - Bid notifications are forwarded via e-mail to 29 Community Outreach Liaison Program (COLP) partners (see page 33 &34) to inform their membership of upcoming opportunities
- Improve payment turnaround time
 - Consolidated process separates payment for work completed from submission of GFE forms
 - The City pays primes within 30 days from completion of work
 - State law requires primes to pay subs within 10 days from receipt of payment from the City
- Provide bonding assistance
 - Continue to provide financial training seminars and continue partnership with surety-support consultant

Local Workforce Program

- State law does not allow:
 - Consideration of minority composition of bidder's workforce in consideration of award
 - Consideration of workforce location in consideration of award
- However:
 1. City Code 15 B requires awardees of contracts to take affirmative action steps to insure applicants are employed and treated equally during employment without regard to race, age, color, religion, sex, national origin or handicap status (this requirement is stated in all bid documents and contract language that each awardee signs)
 2. To encourage both workforce diversity and local hiring preference, the City:
 - City reserves the right to request a company's affirmative action plan or equal opportunity plan from potential contract awardees
 - City reserves the right to request potential awardees' local hiring plan if performance of contract will require prime to hire more staff

How outreach works

Tayo Sokale, Buyer

Jan Hollins, Buyer

June Kissi, Buyer

- The following steps are performed for all bids by the City's ResourceLINK Team:
 - Before the bid submittal
 - Identifies potential Minority and Women-Owned Business Enterprises (M/WBEs) to participate in the City's bidding process
 - A list of certified M/WBEs is developed from our certification agency's data base and are sent notice of the bid and pre bid
 - Ten percent of the list is called to ensure direct contact is made and that they are prepared to respond to the solicitation
 - Works closely with the buyer and/ or project manager to identify potential scopes of work that can be sub contracted to a minority firm

- We have consistently met goals in the following categories:

 - Other Services
- Although we have not met goals in Professional Services and Goods, these categories have a much smaller impact on overall performance than Construction, Architectural and Engineering, and Other Services where the City is exceeding goals

2006 Bond Program

- To develop strategies to strengthen the Community through increased minority participation in the approved City's 2006 Bond Program, the City worked with community groups to address the M/WBE challenges and opportunities of the 2006 Bond Program

 - Create a pool of working capital
 - Continue to find new ways to facilitate insurance/ bonding

DRAFT: FOR DISCUSSION PURPOSES ONLY

A Framework for Strengthening the Community through Increased Minority Participation in the Approved City Bond Program

Dallas city voters recently approved a significant bond program totaling more than $1.5 billion in projects over the next few years. This program, if properly structured, should have a significant impact on a wide range of needs for our City.

Over the last few months, a working group has been established to explore ways this program can have a positive impact on our community by effectively “investing” contracting dollars. Previous bond programs to support both public and private sector development have used a “Good Faith Effort” (GFE) approach, structured to reach targeted percentages (15% to 20%) of participation for minority contractors. The GFE approach is usually accomplished by minority suppliers sub-contracting to large contractors or by the minority contractors receiving very small contracts. This approach also results in minority vendors "splitting" the dollars appointed to meet GFE participation levels. While the total dollars awarded to minority firms may reach GFE numerical goals, this method does little, if anything, to grow smaller, minority firms into thriving, sustainable businesses that can have a meaningful impact on their communities or on the City at large.

The group has specifically focused on strengthening economic development in the southern part of our city and on strategies and tactics to better engage minority firms and ensure they are participating fully in these Bond projects. This outline identifies a framework for accomplishing this.

Establishing a Clear Direction and Objective

In all discussions to date, however, it is apparent that a “repositioning” of the underlying purpose of the bond program is needed. For most constituencies, the perceived objective would revolve around the successful completion of the individual projects, on-time and on-budget. While each project is important and it is understood that budget and schedules be met, the bond program can have an impact far greater than the simple sum of the projects. To achieve this, the fundamental purpose of the bond program needs to be recast from simply successfully completing each project to a much broader objective, such as:

The fundamental objective of the Bond program is to build a stronger, more cohesive and sustainable community in the future.

In other words, the bond program should create strong, vibrant firms which then are in a position to create ownership, wealth, jobs and community participation. Unfortunately, to date, the strength and number of minority contractors in Dallas are limited. Consequently, the focus needs to be on a broad approach which both produces minority participation AND an environment that will, say five years down the line, make for a much stronger economy in the southern part of our City.

With such an understanding, the goal of increasing minority participation takes on a much broader and deeper meaning. And, importantly, the context for taking individual actions and steps to this goal have a much more important and, for many constituencies, more meaningful context. In essence, it raises the discussion to a level that addresses community wide needs, focusing on broad objectives rather than debating individual tactics.

As mentioned, discussions to date have focused on increasing minority participation in the bond program to achieve this much broader objective. While traditional thinking would then place a numerical goal on minority participation (e.g. 15% minority participation in bond program expenditures), it is just as important to have a deeper, more meaningful objective for minority participation. Rather than view bond dollars as an end point, discussion should be on defining objectives which more go to the core of how this could significantly impact the community. In other words, the dollars from the bond program directed at the minority community are a means to a greater end. Rather than just dollars that get expended, they are viewed as an investment that produces return far into the future.

This broader perspective also necessitates encouraging strong participation by minority firms at the “prime” or “general contracting” level. Compared to other markets, joint ventures between larger firms and minority firms at this level are limited in the metroplex. To date, minority participation is usually only prevalent at the sub-subcontracting level in this market.

To achieve this, the framework needs to address at least four broad areas:

1. Actions in the Political Arena to Build Consensus around the Identified Objective
2. Mechanisms to Improve Information Dissemination Relative to Opportunities
3. Tactics to Improve the Contracting Process to Meet the Identified Objective
4. Programs or steps to meet working capital needs
5. Educational Programs, including mentor/protégé programs
6. Processes for Monitoring Success

Each of these will be discussed in turn.

Actions in the Political Arena to Build Consensus around the Identified Objective

There are two broad needs in this area. First, we need to gain a wide consensus on the importance of the fundamental objective identified and an inclusive approach that encourages wide minority participation. Clearly, the first step in this process is enlisting City leadership, creating an overall environment directed toward this goal. It will also be important to have business in Dallas embrace this. In this regards, organizations like the Citizen's Council, Greater Dallas Chamber, other geographic chambers, minority chambers and other such organizations can be instrumental. The step would be to have each of these actively support a wide ranging program of minority participation in the bond program, consistent with the community objective. It will also be beneficial to have industry groups, both leading construction firms and industry associations, support this direction. It is anticipated that each group would be approached by the working group in a methodical manner to lend their support -- again around the need to use the bond program to ensure full participation in contracting opportunities by all constituencies and strengthen economic development in the southern part of our City which then makes for a stronger Dallas in total.

In addition, any steps to gain commitment from other governmental officials at the county or state level are advantageous. However, the emphasis needs to be on leadership beginning at the City level, both the public and private sector. These leaders will be instrumental in garnering the support of county and state officials that can lend support at higher levels.

Second, there may need to be legislation allowing more freedom in the selection process. If we are to encourage strong minority participation, especially at the prime or GC level in the form of joint ventures, consortiums, etc., the granting authority must be able to reflect objectives and needs beyond simply price. This will be essential. Currently, a granting authority has discretion in awarding contracts for vertical construction (e.g. buildings, structures, etc.). It can establish various contracting methodologies and can identify selection criteria, which goes beyond simply price.

It is believed by the working group that options for horizontal construction (e.g. roads, etc.) are much more limited. If additional research does not identify options to broaden selection criteria, then legislation at the state level would be needed. This would require a coordinated effort enlisting legislators and various steps to communicate the importance of this to them.

Mechanisms to Improve Information Dissemination Relative to Opportunities

The discussions to date have highlighted opportunities (and needs) to better coordinate early dissemination of information. There are two broad actions necessary to achieve this:

1. Proactive communication of opportunities

For minority firms to participate in the contracting process, they need to receive more detailed information earlier in the process. This necessitates more informal avenues for the City to publicize upcoming bid packages and the use of non-traditional communication means to reach the minority contractors. Although nothing “new” a methodical process of getting the information out far beyond the actual RFP or bid using both existing associations/trade groups and new vehicles could be beneficial.

2. Building industry relationships

Given the goal of engaging minority contractors as minority partners at the “prime” or GC” level and the more limited use of this vehicle, steps need to be taken to bring large contractors together with minority contractors at this level. This can be done through steps such as:

- Early communication of opportunities and selection criteria
- Industry “mixers”, used currently
- City publication of past participants in projects
- Industry association involvements and functions
- City and industry association introductions of firms
- Planned introductions and interviews for primes and several potential joint venture partners

Tactics to Improve the Contracting Process to Meet the Identified Objective

While it is hoped that all constituencies understand the desirability of participation, it is also understood that selection criteria will need to actively encourage minority participation, be it at the prime/GC level or for subcontracting opportunities. By gaining a consensus around the fundamental objective, the importance of this can be communicated.

While it is assumed that the selection criteria will reward the inclusion of minority firms, several steps will reinforce this.

1. In the process of contracting, the bid packages need to be formulated to allow smaller firms to participate. This means subcontracts need to be of a size where small firms have the capacity and general contracts are large enough to encourage joint venturing. By dividing the scope of work into smaller working portions, minority firms can better handle the work, yet increase their capacity at a steady/productive rate.

2. In the case of joint ventures, it is crucial to understand the working relationship between a larger contractor and a minority firm. Simply having a minority firm involved is not acceptable. To be successful (and consistent with the Fundamental Objective), the relationships have to produce real experience and knowledge for the minority firm, which strengthens the resume and future capabilities of the firm. In other words, the selection process needs to ensure that the minority firm is a true working partner on the project.

This can be accomplished by structuring the interview within the selection process to:

- a. Ensure senior City officials (e.g. highest elected) to participate and reinforce the importance of the relationship
- b. Assess past experience and commitment
- c. Ensure the interview drills deep into the proposed working relationship (e.g. team composition on preconstruction, estimating, etc.)
- d. Communicate on-going monitoring and ensure that the team presents goals for development that can, and will be tracked throughout the duration of the work

Bonding also becomes a significant issue for small firms. Possible solutions and actions which could be evaluated include soliciting commitments from large bonding agents (who may have the flexibility to handle ‘at-risk’ firms) for early involvement within the planning of bond fund implementation and training of firms in consideration. This might be attractive to bonding agents due to their ability to build their base and strengthen relationships with existing client base. It may also be feasible to utilize the “umbrella method” to solicit large ‘mentoring’ entities to structure their bonding capacities to accommodate the “protégé” firms in consideration.

Programs or steps to meet working capital needs

For small firms, the lack of working capital can be a major issue. Limited working capital prevents firms from pursuing initial opportunities or from increasing their base of business and size of opportunities. While there may be a number of options, two specific actions have been identified:

1. Introduce an advanced pay program

With the traditional pay method of paying only when work has been performed, smaller firms without access to working capital are often precluded from opportunities. They do not have the monetary capabilities to cover mobilization costs, increase their labor pool or finance the acquisition of needed tools and equipment to begin a given project.

Although there will clearly be risks (and losses), advancing payments on certain contracts, meeting specific requirements and with appropriate controls will increase the available pool of minority contractors and provide an ability for firms to build their base of business and achieve the identified objective of the program to create strong, stable companies.

2. Create a pool of working capital at the bond program level

Although there may be options for smaller minority firms (in the form of certain types of CDA financing or small business loans), in reality, these are very difficult to access for an individual minority firm in the early stages of development. By having the “program” (or a related entity set up for this purpose), access this type of lending and create a pool (to be administered by the lending firm or other structure), this would make it more accessible and focused on this particular group of participants.

Educational Programs, including mentor/protégé programs

The process also should incorporate formal and required education programs. The programs need to focus on business training, contracting methods and other functional business skill areas. If the firms are to survive and grow (the Objective), we need to use this as a means to provide the skills that are needed to become a stronger, larger and more viable firm. Small firms usually do not focus on these areas and later suffer irreparable harm. Such education programs are available within the industry.

Processes for Monitoring Success

The overall effort needs to have a process for monitoring progress against identified goals. It is suggested that a group, perhaps the already established working group supplemented by public officials, business leaders in the community and industry participants be chartered with such responsibility.

The focus would be both on monitoring City performance and the individual progress of the joint ventures and firms receiving contracts. The role would not be of “policing” but rather establishing a process where all parties were aware that, given the importance to the community, the community would be continually monitoring to ensure success. This could be accomplished by regular bi-annual reviews with the City and selected contracting ventures. Hopefully, these reviews would identify “best practices” that could be incorporated into future efforts.

The City should also provide oversight that includes reviews of joint ventures to ensure contracts are being carried out in the true spirit of its commitment to joint venturing.

This includes majority firms demonstrating adequate participation by minority firms in contracting dollars and that minority firms are progressing on their growth track and also widening the circle of minority participation by too using minority subcontractors.

The preceding framework is designed to not only involve minority firms in the City bond program, but also ensure that the community of Dallas prospers long into the future from the contributions of well established and sustaining minority contractors. Hopefully, this can be a framework for not only establishing such success through this bond program but a model for programs in the entire region going forward.
